We need a clean up crew and also about twenty-five (25) women to serve on committees to earn money for repairs that should be made. What we need is a regular membership. It's hard to tell where to start, we need so much.

Those interested contact Mabel O'Brien 17-12 and tell her what time you can give. She will make necessary arrangements.

Respectfully submitted, Mabel O'Brien - 10-23-48

GOULD EKES 9-0 WIN OVER TOUGH BERLIN

Last Saturday Gould won its fifth game of the season and still maintains an uncrossed goal line. Berlin High presented its best team in many years and gave the Huskies plenty of trouble. Midway of the first period Gould recovered a Berlin fumble on the visitors 38 yard line and four plays later Charlie Smith heaved a long pass to John Philbrick who scored untouched. The touchdown play covered 35 yards and the score came before Gould had run up a first down. The place kick struck the goal posts but Gould led 6-0.

From here on the game was played mostly in midfield with neither team threatening until Gould found themselves on the seven yard line after Ireland had made a 17 yard run. Two tries at the line failed and Jerry Davis, who was sidelined with injuries, came in to boot a field goal to put the Bethel team out front, 9-0.

With Davis out of the line-up the brunt of the ball carrying fell on Ireland, Hall, and Marshall. These three played well but a hard-charging Berlin line kept their long gains down to a minimum. Adams, W. Bennett, and Hamilton showed up well in the line.

The Mountaineers gathered 7 first downs to Gould's 5; but Smith's accurate right arm and Davis' trusty toe was the margin of victory. For Berlin, Viger and L. Blason did some fine ball carrying especially during the last part of the 3rd period and the first part of the last quarter, when Berlin ran up four first downs in a row.

Both teams had little success with passes except for Smith's touchdown heave. Gould tried four others, two going incomplete and the other two intercepted by Viger of Berlin. The visitors passed 10 times connecting one for 13 yards, eight fell incomplete, and Hall intercepted the other.

LIGHT VOTE EXPECTED

ALL signs seem to indicate that the turnout at the polls on November 2 will be the smallest in any presidential election of the past 100 years.

New York is one of the few cities in the nation where a new registration of voters is required every year. It invariably has provided an almost exact tip-off as to how heavy the national vote is going to be. This year the New York registration is extremely low.

Translated into national terms, the New York figures indicate that only 45 or 46 million Americans, about half of the 94 million who are entitled to vote, will go to the polls. Experts say that considering the large population increase, 58 or 60 million persons should be voting this year. In 1940, when Roosevelt won his third term, the vote was just short of 50 million.

Negligent Voters

It is evident that the American citizen is growing careless of his voting rights and responsibilities. A smaller percentage of the eligible voters cast their ballots now than did back in the Roosevelt-Taft election 36 years ago. When McKinley defeated Bryan, 75 per cent of the voters turned out compared with 55 per cent in 1944.

The Middle-West has the best voting record. Illinois led the nation when 75 per cent of the eligible voters went to the polls in that state in the past presidential election. Indiana's standing was 70 per cent; Wisconsin, 66 per cent; Michigan, 59 per cent; Nebraska, 70 per cent; and Iowa, 67 per cent.

In several states only 10 or 15 per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots in the 1944 election.

Foreign Record

The voting record of almost every nation where the people still have the free democratic vote is better than that of the United States.

In the recent national elections in Sweden, 82 per cent of the eligible voters turned out. In the last national election in England the vote was 76 per cent and in Canada it was 74 per cent. In the French and Italian elections more than 80 per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots for democratic victories.

SCOUTS PREDICT MAINE MAY GO DEMOCRATIC

The National Election is next Tuesday. Eleven months ago I decided under some pressure, that I would do what I could for the Democratic Party in Maine. I was persuaded to run for the U. S. Senate, the top position that the State of Maine could offer. Though I had no difficulty in the Primary election, I was defeated in the final State election.
I have always had a warm admiration for President Truman ever since I first met him years ago in Missouri. Maine people may not know how well President Truman rates in Missouri. He will get a bigger majority in Missouri than Dewey will get in New York. President Truman is the type of man whom the plain people admire. Like Lincoln he has had opposition, but also like Lincoln, he will live thru history as a champion of the common man.

Ever since September 13, I have been working for President Truman's election. The papers did not mention it, but I have recently spent a week in Washington, and I have been traveling about the State of Maine trying to make the people see that Maine can be in the Truman column when the vote is counted late on November 2.
I am glad to say, that a Lewiston paper is in agreement with me. From an editorial which I have in hand, I read as follows: "Maine Republicans may think that they did their stuff last September by marking up big margins. They could easily lose their shirts on Dewey on Nov. 2."

The big reason why Maine does not pile up a bigger Democratic vote is that because money talks, and Republicans have spent big money in Maine. Over the nation, it has been spending five times as much as the Democrats, and in Maine, it has spent many times more.

The total contributions I received from all sources to date, for my senatorial campaign was $25. With such financing one cannot win elections, no matter how much time, energy and effort the candidate himself put into it.

ADRIAN H. SCOUTEN, M. D.

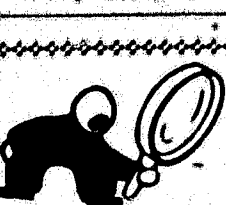

We found the easy way to collect compliments is to give complete satisfaction.

Come here for service and accessories.

MAKING MAINE SAFE FOR HUNTERS. In a campaign to make Maine the safest state in which to hunt, the Inland Fisheries and Game Department has put out 10,000 Safety Posters like those shown above. Nailed to trees, posts, old buildings and other spots where hunters pass by, the posters tell a graphic story that should help to eliminate hunting accidents, the Department earnestly hopes. Last year, hunting accidents were cut down considerably through a safety campaign.

The Way I See It

Well, I see where that umpire who was in hot water in the world's series has said that it would have been a dull set if Boudreau hadn't been backing at him all the time. Now, Mr Stewart, you are paid to umpire ball games not to provide entertainment for the fans.

Evidently, while most of the officials of sports contests are content with doing their work in the conventional manner, more and more are trying to divert the fans' attention away from games. Such grandstanding does nobody any good, but it does increase the hat size of a few glibly officials.

Now that Frankie Crosetti and Bill Dickey have signed to coach for the New York Yankees next year it unites the two players who are still in Yankee spangles that played with Babe Ruth. Dickey managed the Bombers for a short time in 1946, succeeding Joe McCarthy, but was in turn succeeded by Johnny Neun, now scouting for the Yankees.

I note by the papers that Bowdoin has selected two athletes to compete for Rhodes Scholarships. That is going to surprise a lot of people who thought that college players didn't have to know to much except how to play football.

There's a college conference down South that says it is all right for a man to play in sports even if he is a professional, but he can't play the sport in which he is a professional. If you ask me that is the way it should be, despite anything those stuffed shirts in the American Amateur Athletic Union holler about those "awful" professionals.

Dear Ol' Gould is still looking for the first touchdown to be scored against them. Well boys, the longer opponents fail to score, the more they are apt to. Things have a way of evening up and besides that football takes funny bounces at times.

Well, the AP poll put Al Dark out front for "Bookie of the Year" honors. It's too bad that they don't have hard and fast rules for that award. Dark no doubt is very deserving of the honor since 1948 was his first full season but he played around 16 games for the Braves in 1946. It is a shame that such a fine rookie as Richie Ashburne of the Phillies didn't get the honor as he never played major league ball before this season. Oh well, if the Phillies had won the pennant he might have got the honor.

POLICE TO NAB ANY KNOWN VIOLATORS OF VEHICLE INSPECTION LAW

State Police Chief Francis J. McCabe today ordered State Troopers to start combing the state's highways Monday for vehicles failing to bear the October State Inspection sticker.

At the same time, Chief McCabe issued orders that troopers should be on the alert for vehicles bearing stickers but having obvious mechanical defects.

Both motor vehicle owners and inspection stations involved in fraudulent inspection cases will be dealt with equal severity, McCabe warned.

State Troopers have been keeping a close watch this month on the more than 1200 inspection stations in Maine in an effort to uncover bootleg inspections.

The state's semi-annual inspection period closes Sunday.

Parents of Bethel School Children:

Again we are asking for donations to help us carry on the Hot

Lunch Program for this year.

We need the support of every parent of school children regardless of whether or not they benefit by the Program. Indirectly we all gain in knowing we are helping to provide a project which means healthiness and happier children in our community.

We hope to start the hot lunches

by December 1 this year, if possible. We are setting aside the week of November 1 to receive any and all donations. Children may bring supplies or food to school or they may be left at the Primary School during school hours.

The following items are listed to give donors an idea of what will be needed: tumblers, dish cloths, dis-wipers, salt pork, onions, apples, dry beans, carrots, flour, shorting, molasses, corn macaroni, string beans, pens. After the pro-

Camera Club Holds Initial Contest

On Wednesday, October 13, the first photo contest of the year was held by the Gould Camera Club.

The contest, open only to club members, had as its theme, "Vacation

Prints" and contained pictures made only during this summer vacation. The prizes given to the winners were packages of Rembrandt print paper manufactured by the Remington-Rand Company.

Every member of the club was allowed to vote on the pictures.

There was much heated discussion concerning the various prints and everybody, old-timers and fledglings alike, took active part in the proceedings. When the votes were tabulated it was found that Phil Hussey's snap of his brother sailing was the most popular. Second came

Miss Mary Whitney's picture of a little boy holding a fish. Third place went to Claire Macy's "Marble Quarry." There were fifteen entries and thirteen entrants.

Prizes given to the winners were standard packages of 8"x10" Rembrandt print paper, donated to the club by the Remington-Rand

Company. Each package contained a different type of paper. The paper is a relatively new product, and has come out only recently. The club has purchased a supply of this paper and it will be used extensively in the club's next contest.

The tentative date for the club's next photo contest is November 18.

A Right to the Heart

A SHORT-SHORT STORY
BY HANS RUESCH

JOHN DOUGHERTY, one of those round, pink, bald-headed, cigar-puffing fight managers with little red eyes and a head large enough for two, left "the Kid" on the rubber table and got hold of his niece Elly who was nervously pacing the corridor. The prelims were already on in the Garden and the roar of the mob demanded the kill came through in muffled waves.

"Uncle needs your help, Chick," Dougherty whispered, pulling the girl into a corner. She looked at him with mock suspicion.

The kid had him in a corner.

"It's about the Kid?" she asked. Her uncle nodded. "Then little Elly's not interested," she said airily. "You did everything to keep me off him since you imported him from the sticks, never left us alone a single moment. And now little Elly's not interested in helping uncle out."

"I ain't no clerkman, I'm a fight manager!" Dougherty cried, wringing his hands. "Where'd he be if I hadn't kept the dames offa him?"

"Today, thanks to a shrewd management, the kid was encountering the heavyweight champion for the title."

"What, what?" Elly inquired, warming a little.

"Listen, Chick. We both know that the Kid's got what it takes to reverse Bummy Martin of the crown. But now, what happens? He's suddenly still with stage-fright."

"You mean he's uncovered a yellow streak?"

"He ain't yellow!" Dougherty yelled. "Every young leatherpusher gets jittery at his first crack at the title. When the Kid faces the Champ, his legs'll turn to rubber. He can't help it. It's human nature. We've got to put him in a mood to make him get out that corner swinging with both hands. And it's gonna take psychology to do it."

"Have you ever studied psychology?"

"I never did such a thing in my life!" Elly answered indignantly.

"But psychology's scientific! Psychology's hot stuff!" Dougherty assured her fervently. "It's a smart guy's racket. Now here's the low-down: There are two types of people in the world—the introverts and the extroverts, and sometimes it's pretty hard to make out what type a guy is, to make the right diagnosis. Because the Kid's been ship-heavy since he got here, and without a good reason, I take it he's the introverted type."

"Meaning . . . ?"

"Lousy with emotions . . . Wringing inside of himself . . . taking everything too serious. Any time you give him the blues, but at the same time, a little thing can bother his self-confidence to the skies. For instance, you tell him casually, 'Listen, Kid . . . I've heard the Champ's scared to death of that left hook of yours. He's nervous over the bout . . . Something to that effect, see? Then the self-confidence comes crawling back. Catch on?'"

"Sure. But what if you tell all that to the wrong guy?"

"To the extroverted type?—the wide open, jolly, expansive type? There'd be the very deuce to pay with that treatment! You tell a guy like that that the Champ looks up to him and he's liable to develop such a liking for him that his whole killer instinct goes to the dogs and he couldn't hurt him any more than he could his grandmother."

"And where do I come in at?" Elly was becoming impatient.

"You're the whole thing. Me, I can't put anything over on the Kid any more. He knows I'm a smart guy and he gets suspicious, no matter what I tell him. Give him the works. But don't forget he's an introverted guy."

"Oh well, for golly's sake, if I do it, it won't be because of you."

"Elly, Lamb. You're the sweetest sister's girl that an uncle ever had."

While the opening bell was still sounding, the Kid poured into the Champ in his best manner, drove him against the ropes and belted him with both hands. The Champ moved away and the Kid followed and the mob came up and gasped. The Champ tried to clinch but the Kid roughed him away, staggered him and made him flounder and slugged him. He nailed the Champ with a one-two to the body that pulled down the cover.

Dougherty was beaming. Dougherty was lavishing cigars and pets on the back. Dougherty was throwing a terrific party. Looking across the arena he spotted the Kid, all-absorbed in the girl he was dancing with, and that girl was Elly.

"How does it feel to be champ, Kid?"

"Feels great!" the Kid grinned. "Feels grand."

"That's what psychology did for you, Champ. Me and psychology!" Dougherty added.

"Leave us alone," the Kid said amiably. "Got my mind on more important things now than to listen to some fast line of yours."

"But you gotta listen, Champ!" Dougherty drew himself up to his full 5 ft. 3. "You gotta know what a smart manager you got yourself!"

"Smart manager my eye. I owe everything to this girl here. I had a queer feeling of lightness before the fight. Kinda stage-struck, I guess—first time in the Garden . . . Bummy Martin's been mouthing about me."

"Aw . . ." Dougherty beamed.

"Yeah! She said he bragged he'd drop me on my pants in the first round, that he'd make a lot of insulting remarks. I wouldn't repeat it—it's too low-down—but believe me, that made me see red."

Dougherty was turning several shades of purple. He looked menacingly at Elly, whose eyes were twinkling merrily.

"Thanks for the hint, Uncle Jim," she said. "Only, you see, I made out the Kid was the darnedest introvert that ever climbed between the ropes."

"But how . . . how could you make that out?" her uncle gasped. "You hardly knew him!"

"Well, it's one of those things that don't take time. Any man that hugs and kisses a girl that minute he's alone with her the way he did . . . believe me, Uncle, that man is the open, jolly, expansive type of a not a great champion's favorite bride!"

MEAT AND HOMES

Some people are unable to buy as much meat as they would like. Some people cannot build homes because of record prices for labor and supplies. During the depression years on the hoof sold for as little as six cents a pound, and hogs went for three cents. There were people then who could not buy meat or build homes, even at rock-bottom prices. Then, as now, supply and demand were the controlling factors in establishing prices—and it is always true that families in the lower income brackets are constantly confronted with the problem of how to make both ends meet.

Wages and employment are at record levels. This generated a tremendous demand for meat. The supply of meat has not kept up with that demand. Last year the feed crops were relatively short. As a consequence, livestock numbers were reduced. The marketing of beef cattle in 1948 has run well below the level of 1947. The point is that for several years we have been eating our beef cattle faster than we have produced them. Meat animals aren't machines that can be swiftly made in any desired quantity on a production line. It takes months and years to ready stock for market and no efficiency expert has found a short cut. When demand tends to be greater than the supply, high prices are inevitable.

A reimposition of price controls would discourage production, and probably bring about an acute meat shortage. Much of the available meat would be diverted into the black market. And the lower income consumers would be worse off than ever.

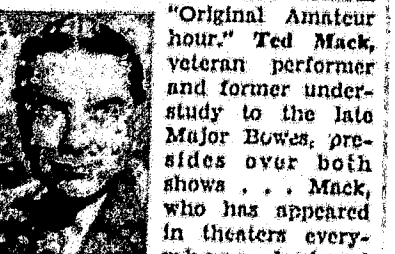

Increased meat production is necessary. It will come eventually. In the meantime, supply and demand establish the prices at which meat is sold in our free market, and it is folly to blindly condemn farmers, packers or anyone else.

See you now in the CITIZEN.

A PEEK AT THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY
WNWS Radio-Screen Editor

AMERICA'S most cheerful, 14-year-old family tradition in popular entertainment returned to the airwaves recently when local outlets of the ABC network brought back the famous

Ted Mack

"Original Amateur hour." Ted Mack, veteran performer and former understudy to the late Major Bowes, presides over both shows . . . Mack, who has appeared in theaters everywhere, helped Bowes discover thousands of "amateurs" who have since become successful . . . "Farm raised youngsters are usually the most talented applicants," Mack contends.

The first second-generation Quiz Kid girl was born recently to Mrs. Margaret Merrick Scheffelin, 20-year-old ex-Quiz Kid now married to an air force officer . . . She shares second-generation honors with nine-month-old Philip Teeter, son of ex-Quiz Kid Barbara Hutchinson . . . The airbranes are filled with range music these days, with Autry and Rogers singing and acting on their shows . . . The latest one to be smitten by the bug is Tex Ritter, who is negotiating for a network series.

Platter Chatter

Things are slowing down these days in the record world but there are a few new releases that should be able to supplant "A Tree in the Meadow" and "It's Magic" fairly soon . . . Capitol has several good ones you might look up . . . One is the very popular "Whiffenpoof Song" done up handsomely by the Pied Pipers . . . A yummy rendition on the reverse of that favorite "Dream" will lull your worries away.

Nick Lucas, that crooner of yesterday, has been signed by Capitol a line with the modern trend toward banjo-playing and singing roudabouts . . . Nick's first release, a pair of two songs he popularized in his hey-day and they're still every bit as good—"Tip Toe Through the Tulips" and "Kick by Kick" . . . Capitol has also re-released Sonny Day's recording of "Daddy Day" backed by "Fifi the Flirtin' Girl," for those who like Irish music and swing Irish tunes.

Successful Parenthood

MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS

Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

OCCASIONALLY, when we receive notice of the results of a scientific study of a human problem, we are tempted to exclaim, "Are the experts just finding that out—we've known it all along!" Recently, for example, we read in a government publication that it had been found in an experimental community project that "grandfathers, often neglected, have something to add to the understanding of children."

Since when have grandfathers had to be discovered? Why, grandfathers have always been a mixture of Santa Claus and Peter Pan—combining the comfort of age and wisdom with the companionableness of another child. Because grandfathers are old enough to admit that, like Peter Pan, they've never entirely outgrown boyhood. In the years of fatherhood a man has to pretend to be grown-up, and sometimes he works so hard at it that he forgets what it is like to be a child. But grandfathers have learned that time is made-made and so can ignore it, while children haven't found out about time as yet and are blissfully unaware of its demands.

This bond between the very old and the very young prepares the child to look forward to his own aging. A pattern of extended years forms in his mind and he is less likely to try to crowd everything into youth. Besides, grandfathers rarely hurry children and the child is thus helped to savor his own childhood instead of impatiently longing to be the "next age." This is especially helpful if there is an older brother and sister of whom the child is inclined to be envious. It is easier to be content with being little if there is someone grown up who is willing to share the quieter pools of family life while the older children stir up the main channel.

Perhaps girls, even more than boys, find grandfathers salt-of-the-earth companions. Especially if their fathers are preoccupied or ill-at ease with daughters, as sometimes happens, a grandfather can furnish that peek into the masculine world which a growing girl needs.

But the friendship with grandfather shouldn't be one-sided—not all the treats and stories and understanding should come from the elder. Children should be encouraged to make life cheerier and more comfortable for the aged. Little acts of unselfishness are easier to perform for someone old, for it is hard to give up your radio ticket or football or doll's tea set to another child, and not want them back again almost at once. But bringing grandfather a hot cup of coffee in the morning, or saving him the shiniest apple, is pure pleasure. And it is mostly through experiencing joy in giving that unselfishness is acquired.

Yes, grandfathers have "something to add," but it isn't something new—it's the added love and patience which give children confidence in adults even if their still young parents are at times flighty and unpredictable.

For really hearty, nourishing sandwiches, combine Swiss or American cheese with a cold cut such as ham, corned beef, sliced pot roast, bologna, or salami.

Don't forget lunch box surprises in the form of dates, raisins, peeled oranges, sugar cookies, gingerbread or popcorn balls.

"EASY DOES IT"

By HELEN HALE

A REGULAR SHOE BAG with its numerous pockets is a wonderful thing to tuck on the inside door of the kitchen closet. Put into it such small items as string, nails, screws, bottle caps, etc., that usually clutter the kitchen drawers.

ALL KNIVES that have become discolored will usually clean if you rub them with scouring powder and a damp dishcloth.

After scouring the bath tub to gleaming whiteness, wash around a tablespoonful of soap jelly with plenty of hot water with a long handled brush to remove the last persistent grains of cleanliness that like to cling to the tub.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Cherry-Apple Relish (Makes 1½ quarts)

4 cups fresh cherries
3 apples, peeled and cored
3 oranges
1 lemon
¾ cup sugar

Put cherries and apples through food chopper. Quarter whole oranges and lemon, remove seeds and put through chopper. Add sugar and blend. Chill in refrigerator a few hours before serving. This relish will keep well for several weeks in the refrigerator.

After washing your chinless bed-spreads, hang them on the line double and inside out. The tufts, by rubbing against each other, will dry fluffy.

IT'S A GOOD IDEA to place a small hand brush, bristle-side up, in the soap dish to hold the soap. This keeps the soap fairly dry and there will always be some soap on the brush when you need to use it.

Those broken bits of crackers that you don't know what to do with, make excellent crumbs if you'll just crush with a rolling pin and place in a jar for use as needed.

After woolen garments are washed, squeeze out the excess moisture into a thick towel by kneading motions. Then gently pull the garments into shape and pin against a towel or cloth so they will dry in the proper shape and shade.

Wisdom Literature in the Bible (Temperance)

Lesson for October 31: Proverbs 10:1-9; Ecclesiastes 2:1-3.

Memory Selection: Proverbs 10:9.

THE PROVERBS, three thousand of which Solomon wrote, belong to the "wisdom literature" of the Bible. They are distinguished from proverbs of other nations by their religious character.

The theme of these examined today is that wickedness does not pay. They who seek profit in wickedness are disillusioned in the end. But righteousness brings reward. God does not always make a good man rich, but he does give him peace of mind and security.

In Ecclesiastes, another form of wisdom literature, the aged Solomon examines the follies he had tried to the full. And the royal epicurean came to the conclusion of the whole matter, "Fear God and keep his commandments."

The lesson text was written about three thousand years ago, but how modern are its lessons! Attention to the first proverb found in the lesson would work a great change in our American life—sons and daughters would be saved from bitter disappointment. Diligence would work a wholesome change. Fewer hands would be held out for a dole. And fewer victims would drain the cup of strong drink to the bitterness of its dregs. Drinking intoxicating liquor does not pay. The only safe way to avoid its ruinous effects is to leave it alone. Total abstinence is the only safeguard against beverage alcohol.

Let us be warned and armed by the wisdom of the ages against the sinful follies that destroy at the last.

SORRY EXAMPLE

The American people would do well to keep an eye on England's "free" health service which staggered into operation last July. It is the kind of thing that proposals such as the long-pending Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would fasten on this country.

Instead of being "free," the plan will cost the English taxpayers some $600,000,000 a year in the beginning—a very large sum for a country of her population and economic position—and the cost will increase heavily in the future. Workers and employers will also kick in for a period of time. The benefits paid are determined by a mass of confusing regulations, and will run to only about $5.20 a week for the sick worker. Most important of all, there is a definite insufficiency of doctors to carry out all the provisions of the scheme.

The doctor's position is exceptionally interesting. Most of them are refusing to participate, on the grounds that professional standards make it impossible for them to become civil servants. They have

ELEANOR GORDON GUILD

The Eleanor Gordon Guild met Wednesday, Oct. 27, at Virginia Mundt's. Everyone had a wonderful time, as a Halloween party was held after the meeting.

The Extra Activities Committee gave their report and they had planned extra activities four months in advance. It was suggested that the Guild hold one regular business meeting a month and have the other meeting a social gathering.

It was decided that the girls need an advisor, an older member of the church to come to their meetings and help on certain problems that come up.

Games were played and refreshments served. Vera Gallant, Evelyn Roberts, Althea Brown and Betty Blake won prizes during the evening's entertainment.

The next meeting will be at Hil-da Brown's with Althea Brown as co-hostess. Evelyn Roberts and Vera Gallant will have the entertainment and Phyllis Dock the devotions.

Nobody's Business

For some months past we have had the opportunity of reading the statements of the candidates for the highest honors that this nation can give. We have been able to hear these gentlemen by radio and see and hear them via newsreels. With all these conveniences we should be able to choose the best man for our president.

It seems strange that they continue to call it the NEW Deal, even though it was first advertised 16 years ago and put into use the next year. It not only isn't new any longer, but some think that what ever good there may have been in it was exhausted long ago. There are many "new" things that are certainly no improvement over present or past ways of doing. The difference in the final totals, any-New Look is just as useless, but we way.

can be sure it won't last like the New Deal has.

For your own peace of mind next Wednesday morning, please vote on Tuesday. Nothing is more important—it is your last chance in four years.

Very little time is left for inspection of your car. Why not be conscientious about your car's condition? The inspection is a step toward safety for yourself and all who drive during the next few weeks, remember that leaves in the road may have all of the slippery characteristics of glare ice. Already fatal accidents have resulted from underestimating the danger in the leafy-coated highway.

What has become of the old-time campaign buttons? We heard that millions of them were being made this year but we haven't seen one yet. Perhaps the higher-ups do not feel like wasting them on Maine. Probably they would make little present or past ways of doing. The difference in the final totals, any-New Look is just as useless, but we way.
